The tabulation shows that, for the first time since September 1952, the monthly average of about 1,000 carloads has been surpassed, the equipment exceeding the average supply level consisting of ammunition, heavy arms, tanks, a mored scout cars and air force equipment. The increase in the supply of ammunition is due to the summer training of troops. The heavy weapons included a large number of rocket launchers for the rocket launcher units of the four guards mechanized armies. In addition, 180 armored scout cars on 163 railroad cars crossed the border from the USSR in June. An increased supply of air force equipment was consigned to the Cottbus area, presumably for the VP Luft. The rate of shipment for other supply goods remained constant. The June riots did not affect the supply traffic and the information confirms that the supply situation of the Soviet occupation forces in Germany may be considered as stabilized.
